Steeped in History...

Beauvale Charterhouse was founded in 1343 by Nicholas de Cantilupe, Lord of Ilkeston and Greasley, the third of nine priories to be built dedicated to the Carthusian order of monks.

Monks lived a strict, silent life here at Beauvale for nearly 200 years until the dissolution of the monasteries when they refused to sign the oath of supremacy acknowledging Henry VIII as head of the church. John Houghton and Robert Lawrence, Priors of Beauvale were the first to be hanged, drawn and quartered at Tyburn on the 4th May 1535. The Bishop of Nottingham leads a pilgrimage on the Sunday closest to the 4th May every year in memory of the two Martyrs'.

Beauvale is in part of D.H.Lawrence's "Country of my Heart" and features in a couple of his novels as The Abbey and he writes a short story based here called "A Fragment of Stained Glass".

We bought the farm in 2006 with the intention of leading a quiet self-sufficient life. It was derelict and extremely run down, so we arrived with our caravan, which we lived in for a year whilst we renovated the farm cottage.

Little did we know, Beauvale Charterhouse is a scheduled ancient monument of national importance.

English Heritage approached us wanting to consolidate the ruins of the Priory, the arch window was in great danger of collapsing in. They consider this to be one of the most important monastic sites. What we have here are the 2nd most remains of a Carthusian Charterhouse, which includes an ancient beamed ceiling, thought to be the only Carthusian woodwork in the country, dating nearly 700 years old. Since 2007, ongoing consolidation works are still taking place. As of yet the arch window, north wall and the Guest House have been taken off the national buildings at risk register. There is still a lot to do and work is ongoing.

Access to the ruins are available free of charge whilst the Tearooms are open. Guided tours and talks of the ruins can be arranged with a minimum of 6 people. £1 donation per person towards the ongoing consolidation of the ruins.

We would like to thank you all for the ongoing support.

Kind Regards,

Ann and Tony Whyte
